

Personal Loans: Website Copy and Content Strategy

A portfolio and specification project demonstrating finance-industry web copywriting, site structure, and editorial quality control. It was not written for, or on behalf of, any financial institution, and it contains no real company, client, rates, or customer results.

Copywriter's note: The copy is written in the first person plural ("we") as a real lender's site would be. Items in [square brackets] are placeholders for details that only the business can supply and compliance must verify, such as the lender's name, loan amounts, and required disclosures. No figures have been invented to fill them.

1. Project Overview

Element	Detail
Project type	Financial services website copy and site architecture for a personal loan product.
Target audience	Adults researching personal loans who want straightforward information and are comparing options. They are not finance specialists and may be reading several lenders' sites side by side.
User intent	Mostly informational and comparative: "What is this, what will it cost me, and can I trust this lender?" Some visitors are closer to acting and want to know what applying involves.
Website goal	Help visitors understand personal loans well enough to decide whether to apply, and make the next step clear and low-pressure for those who want to take it.
Main customer concerns	Hidden or unclear costs. Jargon. Not knowing whether they will qualify. Fear of being committed or pressured. Uncertainty about what happens to their credit. Whether the lender is legitimate.
Messaging approach	Explain first, ask second. Lead with clarity about costs and process, use plain words, state limits honestly ("depends on your circumstances"), and let the reader control the pace. No urgency tactics, no emotional pressure, no promises about outcomes.

2. Website Structure

The structure follows the order of a visitor's questions: What is this? How does it work? Could I qualify? What if I still have doubts? How do I start?

Page	Purpose	Main content	Primary CTA
Homepage	Establish trust and clarity within seconds, then route visitors to the right depth of information.	Value statement, what to expect, the problem it solves, process overview, FAQ preview.	See how it works
Personal Loans	The core education page. Explains the product, common uses, the application path, and what to ask before committing.	Definition, use cases, process, documents, pre-application questions.	Check what you'll need
How It Works	Walks through each stage from application to repayment so nothing is a surprise.	Step-by-step timeline, what happens at each stage, what the borrower controls.	Start an application
Eligibility	Sets realistic expectations about what lenders consider, without promising outcomes.	Factors reviewed, documents, what to do if unsure.	Review the requirements
FAQs	Answers recurring questions in plain language and reduces support queries.	Grouped questions: basics, costs, applying, after applying.	Contact us
Contact / Get Started	Offers two clear routes: begin an application or talk to a person first.	Application entry, contact options, hours, what to have ready.	Start an application

3. Homepage Copy

HERO HEADLINE

Personal loans, explained before you apply.

HERO SUBHEADLINE

Find out how a personal loan works, what it can cost, and what lenders usually ask for. Then decide whether applying makes sense for you.

PRIMARY CTA

[\[See how it works \]](#)

Secondary link beneath the button: Ready now? Start an application

SUPPORTING MICROCOPY

Reading about your options is free and commits you to nothing.

TRUST / CLARITY SECTION

What we will always make clear

Borrowing is easier to judge when the details are in front of you. Before you accept any loan offer from us, you will be able to see:

- the amount you would borrow and the length of the loan
- your monthly payment
- the annual percentage rate (APR), which shows the yearly cost of borrowing
- any fees, and when they apply
- the total you would repay over the life of the loan

If something is unclear, ask us. A plain answer is part of the service.

Copywriter's note: Each item above is a commitment the business must be able to keep. Confirm with the lender and compliance before publishing, and align wording with disclosure rules in the relevant jurisdiction.

PROBLEM SECTION

Comparing loans should not feel like decoding a contract

Most people looking at personal loans are trying to answer a few practical questions. How much will this actually cost? Will I qualify? What happens if my situation changes?

Too often the answers are buried in small print or wrapped in terms that need a glossary. We have written this site so you can find them without the guesswork.

HOW IT WORKS SECTION

From first question to final decision

- 1. Learn the basics. Read how personal loans work and what they may cost.
- 2. Gather your details. See what information you will need so you are not caught out halfway through.
- 3. Apply. Complete the application when you are ready. [Insert actual steps and any time estimate the business can support.]
- 4. Review any offer. If you are offered a loan, you will see the full terms. Take the time you need before deciding.

Copywriter's note: Process steps and any timing claims must reflect the real application flow. Time estimates are deliberately left out until the business can document them.

KEY BENEFITS

- Plain-language information. Explanations written for people who do not work in finance.
- Costs shown up front. The numbers that matter are presented before you commit, not after.
- No pressure to decide. Read, compare, and come back. Your timeline is yours.

- People you can reach. If you would rather talk it through, [insert contact method and hours].

FAQ PREVIEW

Questions people often ask

- What is a personal loan?
- What information will I need to apply?
- What should I check before I borrow?

[\[Read all FAQs \]](#)

FINAL CTA

Ready to take the next step?

If you have the details you need, you can start an application now. If you would like to talk first, we are happy to answer your questions.

[\[Start an application \]](#) [\[Talk to our team \]](#)

FOOTER DISCLOSURE (PLACEHOLDER)

Loan approval, amounts, and terms depend on the lender's criteria and your individual circumstances. [Insert lender name, licensing information, and all required regulatory disclosures.]

4. Personal Loans Page

PAGE HEADLINE

Personal loans: how they work, what they cost, and what to ask first

INTRODUCTION

A personal loan can be a practical way to cover a large expense or bring several debts together. It can also be a poor fit, depending on the cost and your circumstances.

This page explains how personal loans work, what the application involves, and which questions are worth asking before you commit. It is general information, not personal financial advice.

WHAT A PERSONAL LOAN IS

The basics

A personal loan is a sum of money you borrow from a lender and repay over an agreed period. You usually repay it in regular instalments, often monthly, and you pay interest and sometimes fees on top of the amount you borrowed.

Loans are generally either unsecured or secured. An unsecured loan is not tied to an asset you own. A secured loan is backed by something of value, such as a vehicle or savings, which the lender may be able to claim if you do not repay as agreed. [Confirm which type this lender offers.]

COMMON REASONS PEOPLE CONSIDER ONE

People look into personal loans for many reasons. Some of the more common ones include:

- combining several debts into one payment
- paying for home repairs or improvements
- covering a large planned purchase
- meeting an unexpected cost, such as a medical bill
- funding a major life event

A loan is not the right answer for every situation. If you can wait, save, or borrow more cheaply another way, it is worth comparing those options too.

HOW THE APPLICATION PROCESS GENERALLY WORKS

- You choose an amount and length of loan. A longer term usually means smaller payments but can mean paying more overall.
- You provide your details. This includes personal, income, and employment information.
- The lender reviews your application. This may include a credit check and verification of your documents.
- You receive a decision. If you are offered a loan, you will be shown the terms.
- You decide. You can accept, ask questions, or walk away.
- If you accept, the money is paid out and repayments begin according to the agreed schedule.

Copywriter's note: Steps describe how personal lending typically works. The business should confirm each against its own process before publication.

INFORMATION APPLICANTS MAY NEED

Requirements differ between lenders, but you may be asked for:

- proof of identity, such as a government-issued ID
- your current address and how long you have lived there
- details of your income and employer, and sometimes supporting documents such as payslips or bank statements
- bank account details for payments
- information about your existing debts and regular expenses

Having these ready before you start can make the process easier.

QUESTIONS TO ASK BEFORE APPLYING

Whichever lender you choose, these questions help you compare offers fairly:

- What is the APR, and is the interest rate fixed or variable?
- What is the total amount I would repay over the whole loan?
- Are there fees, such as for setting up the loan, paying late, or paying it off early?
- Can I afford the monthly payment if my income or expenses change?
- What happens if I miss a payment?
- Will applying involve a credit check, and how might it affect my credit record?
- How and when would the money reach me?

CTA

Know what you need? Start when you are ready.

You can begin an application now or look through the requirements first. Either way, you will see the full terms of any offer before you decide.

[\[Check what you'll need \]](#) [\[Start an application \]](#)

5. FAQ Section

General information only. No rates, approval times, or outcomes are stated.

What is a personal loan?

A personal loan is money you borrow from a lender and repay over an agreed period, usually in regular monthly payments. You repay the amount you borrowed plus interest, and sometimes fees. People use personal loans for purposes such as consolidating debt, home improvements, or large one-off costs.

How does a personal loan work?

You apply for an amount and choose a repayment period. The lender reviews your application and, if it offers you a loan, shows you the terms. If you accept, you receive the funds and repay them on the schedule you agreed. Each payment typically covers part of the amount borrowed and part of the interest.

What information may be required when applying?

This varies by lender, but you may be asked for proof of identity, your address, details of your income and employer, bank account information, and information about your existing debts. Some lenders ask for supporting documents, such as payslips or bank statements.

What factors can affect eligibility?

Lenders typically look at your credit history, your income, how much debt you already have compared with that income, and how stable your employment is. The amount and length of the loan you ask for can also matter. No single factor decides every case, and criteria differ between lenders.

What should borrowers consider before applying?

Start with the purpose and whether a loan is the best way to meet it. Then look at the total cost, not just the monthly payment. Check that you could keep up repayments if your circumstances changed, and compare more than one offer. If you are unsure, an independent, qualified financial adviser or a free debt advice service can help.

What is the difference between a secured and an unsecured loan?

A secured loan is backed by an asset, such as a vehicle or savings. If you do not repay as agreed, the lender may be able to take that asset. An unsecured loan is not tied to an asset, so the lender relies mainly on your credit history and income. Unsecured does not mean without consequences: missed payments can still lead to fees, damage to your credit record, and collection action.

What questions should someone ask about loan costs?

Ask for the APR, which reflects the yearly cost of borrowing, including interest and certain fees. Ask whether the rate is fixed or variable, what fees apply (for example, setup, late payment, or early repayment), and what the total repayable amount would be. Comparing the total repayable amount across offers is often the clearest way to see the difference.

Will applying affect my credit score?

It may. Many lenders carry out a credit check as part of an application, and some types of check can be recorded on your credit file. Others, such as preliminary eligibility checks, may not. Ask the lender which type it uses before you apply. [Insert this lender's actual approach.]

What happens after I apply?

The lender reviews your details and may ask for more information or documents. You then receive a decision. If you are offered a loan, you will be shown the terms and can accept, ask questions, or decline. If you accept, the funds are paid out and your repayment schedule begins. [Insert timing only if the business can substantiate it.]

What if I have trouble making repayments?

Contact the lender as early as you can, ideally before a payment is missed. Lenders may be able to discuss options, though this is not guaranteed. Missed or late payments can lead to extra fees and affect your credit record. Free, independent debt advice services can also help.

6. Copy Strategy

How the website builds trust

Trust comes from specificity and restraint. The copy tells visitors what they will see before accepting an offer, explains limits honestly ("requirements differ between lenders"), and avoids language that pressures. It also acknowledges that a loan is not always the right choice, which signals that the site is not simply trying to close a sale.

How complex financial information is simplified

Each term is defined where it first appears: APR is "the yearly cost of borrowing," a secured loan is "backed by something of value." Concepts are explained through what they mean for the borrower, not through formal definitions. Lists break up process steps and requirements, sentences stay short, and the FAQ answers lead with the plain answer before adding nuance.

How customer concerns are addressed

The concerns listed in the overview each get a direct answer. Cost fears are met with the "what we will always make clear" list and the cost questions. Eligibility worries get an honest description of the factors lenders weigh. Commitment anxiety is handled with "reading is free" microcopy and "walk away" language. Credit questions and repayment difficulty each have their own FAQ.

How the CTA moves the visitor toward the next step

The calls to action match the visitor's stage. Early on, the primary CTA is low commitment ("See how it works"). Later pages shift to preparation ("Check what you'll need") and then action ("Start an application"). A human option ("Talk to our team") sits beside the main button so that hesitation has a route other than leaving. Each button describes exactly what happens when clicked.

How the copy avoids misleading financial claims

The copy contains no rates, approval times, savings estimates, testimonials, or promises of acceptance. Words like "may," "typically," and "depends" appear only where the facts truly vary. Anything that requires business-specific confirmation is bracketed instead of invented. Comparative or superlative claims ("lowest," "fastest," "best") are avoided entirely, because they would need evidence.

7. Editing and Quality Check

A checklist for what a copywriter should verify before finance content goes live.

Check	What to look for
Accuracy	Every definition, process step, and cost description matches how the product actually works. Verify terms such as APR, secured, and unsecured against the lender's documents and official guidance.

Check	What to look for
Grammar	Spelling, punctuation, and consistent regional spelling. Read aloud to catch awkward phrasing. Check numerals, capitalization, and hyphenation of recurring terms.
Clarity	Could a reader with no finance background follow each sentence the first time? Replace or define jargon. Keep paragraphs short.
Regulatory / compliance review	Send final copy to compliance or legal. Confirm required disclosures, APR presentation, licensing statements, and any rules on advertising credit in the relevant jurisdiction. Copywriters flag; they do not approve.
Unsupported claims	Remove or substantiate anything that asserts a result, speed, ranking, saving, or guarantee. If it cannot be evidenced, it does not run.
Ambiguous wording	Look for vague terms ("low cost," "quick," "flexible"), unclear pronouns, and sentences that could be read two ways, especially those about fees, credit checks, and eligibility.
Consistency	Use the same name for the same thing throughout ("application," not "request" in one place). Align figures, product names, tone, and contact details across pages, FAQs, and footers.
CTA clarity	Does each button say what happens next? Does it match the page's purpose? Is there one clear primary action, with a lower-pressure alternative nearby?

Open items before publication

- Insert the lender's name, licensing details, and required disclosures.
- Confirm the application steps, contact options, and hours.
- Confirm whether the loans offered are secured, unsecured, or both.
- Confirm how credit checks are carried out at each stage.
- Add loan amount ranges, terms, fees, and APR information only as supplied and approved by the business.